First Year Seminar 060-01
Alcohol in College: Myth and Reality

Fall Term, 2006
T/TH 8:45 – 10:10 pm
Eaton Hall 110

Course Description:

Alcohol abuse continues to be a serious problem on college and university campuses across the nation. Participants in this seminar will examine this problem from both natural scientific and social scientific perspectives. Readings will include public health and social science research literature on the scope of alcohol use in college and the theories proposed to explain that use. The natural science literature will be used to explore the pharmacologic effects of alcohol on the brain, related health risks, and the relationship of blood alcohol concentration to risk and harm. Seminar participants will participate in ongoing research on the scope and consequences of alcohol use on this campus. Finally, educational models for abuse prevention and harm reduction will be explored and evaluated for effectiveness.

Instructors:

Professor David Craig, Dept. of Chemistry, ext. 3611, craig@hws.edu
Office Hours: MWF 8-10am, M 11:10am – 1pm

Nicole Henderson, Service Learning Colleague, email: Nicole.henderson@hws.edu, Box 3173

Attendance

Class attendance is required for course credit. You must contact me immediately if you are unable to attend a class meeting. More than three unexcused absences will result in a failing grade. Please arrange your schedule to accommodate this requirement.

Assignments/Assessment

In addition to reading the texts and attending class as outlined in the syllabus by the dates indicated, several out-of-class assignments are described briefly below that will complement one another in meeting our goals for the course.

1. Weekly writing assignments. There will be a short one to two page paper assigned related to the readings each week. They will be due each Friday to your writing colleague by 5:00 pm. You will have the responsibility of meeting with your writing colleague to discuss the paper, incorporate any changes based on your discussion, and then turn the paper into your professor the following Friday. Writing colleagues are not editors or proofreaders. You are responsible for that yourself. Writing colleagues will help you sort through ideas and they will give you honest feedback on what you have written.

2. Interdisciplinary Term Research Project. Each of you will choose some specific aspect of alcohol use (eg. cause, consequence, particular group pattern, social issue, or policy) to study in detail. You may choose to base the project on a combination of research literature and some data that we have collected. The paper must present both the natural scientific and social scientific perspectives relevant to your project. This paper will be submitted in stages with each stage passing through your writing colleague: 1) research proposal, 2) thesis with annotated bibliography, 3) first full draft of research paper, 4) final draft of research paper. For the weeks that these writing components are due you will not have an additional weekly writing assignment due as well.

3. BAC research data collection. Once we receive approval for BAC data collection each student will be responsible for one night of data collection each week.

4. Service Learning. Each student will be required to complete at least 3 hours of service each week. This service can be completed in a variety of ways. You will be preparing educational presentations to a variety of audiences on and off campus. You will be making presentations in residence halls on campus or at local schools. You may also contribute to any of a variety of service opportunities available through the public service office. You must keep a journal of your service activities that will be emailed to your service learning colleague weekly no later than midnight on Sunday (1-2 pages double spaced). The journal entries should be reflective of connections between the work you do and coursework you have taken. Include estimates of time you spend in service. Entries should be made each day that you do service work.

5. Final Examination (Dec 13, 8:30-11:30am) Your final research paper will be due at this meeting and you will deliver a short oral presentation of your findings.

Grading

Course grades will be determined according to the following weighting:
